

FAMILY CURED OF SKIN TROUBLES

Two Little Girls had Eczema Very Badly—In One Case Child Came Out and Left Bare Places—Father's Head Sore from Child-hood—In All Three Cases

CUTICURA MET WITH ITS USUAL SUCCESS

"I have two little girls who have been troubled very badly with eczema. One of them had it on her lower lip, and I did everything that I could for her, but it did not give in. The next winter when it became very cold, the eczema started all over her face and on her head. It was so bad that she had to leave her face bare for a quarter of a dollar. At the same time her arms were sore and itched. I took her to a doctor, and he said that she had eczema. I bought Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and used them for several weeks. The child grew worse all of the time. The eczema was also on her arms. My husband came home one day with a box of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and a box of Cuticura Pills. I began using them and also the Cuticura Pills and by the time the second box was used their skin was soft and smooth. It had not been a week before the eczema was gone. We kept the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and used them for several weeks. When any little roughness or itching appears on their skin I quickly rub it with the Cuticura Ointment. My husband has used them with most satisfactory results for a sore head which has troubled him from childhood. Mrs. E. Baker, Albion, Me., Sept. 21, 1905."

Cuticura Ointment is one of the most successful remedies for treating the itching humors of the skin and scalp, including cases of hair, infants, children and adults, ever compounded, in proof of which a single anointing with it, preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed by mild doses of Cuticura Pills, is often sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of itching, burning and scaly humors, eczemas, irritations and inflammations, permit rest and sleep and point to a speedy cure when all else fails.

THEY MET BY CHANCE

By GEORGE EDGAR

They met at the seaside on a summer's day.

He wore a motoring cap and riding trousers. She—well, she was a composition made up of a big lot of blouses, brown boots and a fringe.

As they met, they stared at each other. Without moving a muscle in any other part of his face, he smiled, opaciously.

And they passed, like ships in the night, each fingers, postmen and other things that pass.

He raised his cap—the motor cap—most politely; he bowed, still polite, but not with grace; he sidled along by her side deferentially; and he said, "Ah—ah—ah if he had a whole shrimp in his thumb—a live one."

She—she went very red. Also, she pushed her nose higher in the air and slightly forward, accidentally acquiring the Etonian dip, which made her still more fascinating.

Some dreadful minutes passed, in which he grew red and felt all feet. The silence was intense. Even the thrashing tide forgot to sing. But he kept on—the male instinct of the shrimp is strongly developed.

There was something electric in the atmosphere. She knew how full of life he felt, and she smiled.

That gave him courage and he swallowed the shrimp.

"Isn't I see you at Lady Gollightly's dance?" he asked earnestly.

She said, "Go way, man."

"I knew you belonged to a country family as soon as I saw you," he ventured.

Her nose went further forward, but she answered never a word.

"Must have met you out with the Loamshires—hunting," he volunteered with a grin.

"You've got a face like a plate," she answered suddenly apropos of nothing.

"Anyway, I've got a tongue in it," he urged, gently.

She sighed. "That's what I dislike about you—your tongue. You've got a tongue and can talk—that's where you have the advantage of the monkey."

He flicked his brown leggings with his cane.

She looked at him, critically, coldly, with a suggestion of contempt. "If you hadn't had a tongue I should have wondered where you came from. And I should have guessed—the Zoo."

They walked 50 yards in silence.

He was nearly frozen off, but he held on—if only to give her just a piece of his mind of which he really had not too much to spare.

He thought aloud. "No," he murmured. "It wasn't at Lady Gollightly's dance I met you; nor the hunting."

He seemed to be searching his mind. "I think I know—you came from the pickle factory, where they make the sauce."

She looked at him firmly, and was direct in her frank opinion.

"Herbert," she said, "you are the limit."

"I have no limit, not being a book-maker, and my name ain't Herbert."

There was a tired note in her voice. "Somehow, men with faces like yours always look as if they were Herberts."

You've got to be, see, and you are the limit. When it comes to talking of comes from, I'll just take leave to tell you I'm a lady, and I come from no pickle factory. I'm a laundress, if you must know. And if it comes to a guessing—comes from, I can tell from your face how you happened.

You've not got what one could call a starting place. You've just simply occurred—sort of nightmare."

"Look here, Polly," he began again.

"Not Polly," she answered curtly.

"Ann, then?"

"No, nor Ann, nor Matilda, nor Lisa."

"I know," he said, triumphantly.

"Rose."

"Nor Rose," she replied relenting.

"Plain Margaret, that's my name."

"Not plain," he suggested—"not plain. Say—sweet Margaret, lovely Margaret, or—er, dear Margaret."

"You're a rare kiddie," she answered.

He smiled and tried to walk like a soldier.

"Look here—I take all that back about the pickle factory," he began.

No answer.

"Swapping the sauce," he added, she tossed her head.

If you find any substance in your baking injurious to health made from baking powder in this can there is—

$1000
In it for you

Calumet has been backed for years by an offer of $1,000 for any substance injurious to health found in the baking prepared with it.

Does not this and the fact that it complies with all pure food laws, both State and National, prove that Calumet is absolutely pure?

With the purity question settled—then Calumet is undoubtedly the best Baking Powder. It contains more leavening power; it is more uniform—every can is the same. It assures better results—and is moderate in price.
